EVEN HEROES NEED TO TALK:

PSYCHOLEGAL SOFT-SPOTS IN POLITICAL ASYLUM LAWYERING

A THESIS
SUBMITTED TO THE
STANFORD PROGRAM IN INTERNATIONAL LEGAL STUDIES
AT THE STANFORD LAW SCHOOL,
STANFORD UNIVERSITY
IN PARTIAL FULFILLMENT OF THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE DEGREE OF
MASTER OF THE SCIENCE OF LAW

By Tehila Sagy

May 2005
Abstract

This research identifies emotional pressure points pertaining to the asylum seeking client’s narration of her traumatic past persecution in the process of preparing the asylum claim. A typology of psycholegal soft-spots was offered, which includes the potential impact of the work done by the asylum seeking client and her lawyer on both parties. Interviews with Bay Area lawyers who represented asylum seekers were conducted in order to assess the level of asylum lawyer’s awareness to special needs dictated by the psycho-legal soft spots during asylum representation. Lawyers were asked about how they handle those issues and about training and support provided for them in order to handle emotional pressure points.

The conclusions from the interviews are that lawyers are neither trained to handle the identified psycholegal soft-spots nor supported in any way while attempting to handle them. In view of the psychological challenges embodied in asylum work, these deficiencies need to be addressed. Lawyers should receive training with respect to PTSD in general and three psycholegal soft spots I mentioned in particular. In addition, there is a need to establish support system for lawyers who engage in asylum work.

This paper also suggests that improving lawyer’s awareness to salutogenic elements of the preparation of asylum claim can improve the emotional well being of both asylum seeking clients and their lawyers. Too, it was suggested that many therapeutic elements are inherent to the process of preparing asylum claims, hence lawyers need not become psychologist in order to help their clients heal. Such work will also help the lawyer experience herself as a compassionate witness to her client’s narration and will enable her to re-connect to her humanity.
INTRODUCTION........................................................................................................................................... VII

CHAPTER 1: THE ASYLUM PROCESS ........................................................................................................... XIII

1. BACKGROUND: ASYLUM PROCESS AND THE ADJUDICATION STANDARD .................................................. XIII
   A. Definition of Asylee ............................................................................................................................... XIII
   B. The Application Process ...................................................................................................................... XIV
   C. The Asylum Officer’s Decision ............................................................................................................ XVI
   D. Persecution: The Doctrinal Focal Point .............................................................................................. XVII

2. CREDIBILITY AND ITS CRITIQUE ........................................................................................................ XVIII
   A. The Court’s Definition of Credibility ..................................................................................................... XIX
   B. Critique of Credibility: Barriers to Asylum Seekers Ability to Be Considered Credible ................. XX
      1. PTSD, Language and Culture as a Barrier to Establishing Credibility ........................................... XX
      2. Naïve Realism as a Barrier to Establishing Credibility .................................................................. XXI
      3. Contextual Credibility – a Barrier to Establishing Credibility ....................................................... XXII

CHAPTER 2: PSYCHOLEGAL SOFT SPOTS IN THE FIELD OF ASYLUM LAWYERING ................... XXIV

1. BACKGROUND: TRAUMA AND POST TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER ............................................ XXVI
   A. Persecution as Trauma ......................................................................................................................... XXVI
   B. Post Traumatic Stress Disorder .......................................................................................................... XXVII

2. PSYCHOLEGAL SOFT SPOT 1: PTSD AS A BARRIER TO A SUCCESSFUL ASYLUM CLAIM ........... XXVIII
   A. Memory and Concentration .................................................................................................................. XXIX
   B. Expressiveness ..................................................................................................................................... XXIX
   C. Social Denial of Trauma ...................................................................................................................... XXX

3. PSYCHOLEGAL SOFT SPOT 2: THE IMPACT OF THE RELATIONSHIP WITH THE LAWYER ON THE ASYLUM SEEKER’S PSYCHOLOGICAL WELL BEING ............................................................... XXXI
   A. Evoking the Traumatic Experience ..................................................................................................... XXXI
   B. Stressing Lack of Security ................................................................................................................... XXXIII
   C. Inquisitorial Questioning .................................................................................................................... XXXIII

IV
CHAPTER 3: THE LAWYER'S ROLE

1. CURRENT UNDERSTANDING OF LAWYER'S ROLE IN THE CONTEXT OF ASYLUM LAWYERING (A TECHNOCRATIC DESCRIPTION) ................................................................. XLII
2. TOWARDS A NEW UNDERSTANDING OF ASYLUM LAWYERING .............................................. XLI

Narrative Facilitator ...................................................................................................................... XLI
Narrative Translator ..................................................................................................................... XLI
Acculturation Agent ..................................................................................................................... XLI

CHAPTER 4: INTERVIEWS WITH BAY AREA ASYLUM LAWYERS ......................................................... XLVII

1. METHODOLOGY ......................................................................................................................... XLVII
2. LAWYERS AND PSYCHOLEGAL SOFT SPOT 1: TRAUMA AS A BARRIER TO GAINING ASYLUM ......................................................................................... XLIX
   A. Awareness .............................................................................................................................. XLIX
   Dealing with the Need to Be Narrative a Facilitator to Traumatized People ....................... XLIX
   B. Training ..................................................................................................................... LI
   c. Coping .................................................................................................................................... LI
3. LAWYERS AND PSYCHOLEGAL SOFT SPOT 2: THE IMPACT OF THE RELATIONSHIP WITH THE LAWYER ON THE ASYLUM SEEKER'S PSYCHOLOGICAL WELL BEING ........................................................................... LII
   A. Awareness ............................................................................................................................. LII
   B. Training ................................................................................................................................ LIII
   C. Coping .................................................................................................................................... LIV
3. LAWYERS AND PSYCHOLEGAL SOFT SPOT 3: THE IMPACT OF HEARING A TRAUMATIC NARRATIVE ON THE LAWYER ......................................................................................................................... LV

CHAPTER 5: CONCLUSIONS ............................................................................................................. LXIV

1. THE NEED FOR TRAINING ......................................................................................................... LXIV
CHAPTER 6: APPLYING THERAPEUTIC JURISPRUDENCE IN THE FIELD OF ASYLUM LAW ...68

1. EXISTING LITERATURE ON THERAPEUTIC JURISPRUDENCE IN THE CONTEXT OF ASYLUM LAW ...............68

2. THERAPEUTICALLY ORIENTED ASYLUM LAWYERING ...........................................................................70

A. Application of Lewis Herman's Model of Recovery to the Asylum Field ............................................72

1. The First Stage of Recovery .......................................................................................................................73

2. The Second Stage of Recovery ................................................................................................................75

B. Application of Liberation Psychology to Asylum Lawyering .................................................................76

C. Application of Narrative Exposure Therapy to Asylum Lawyering .......................................................78

D. Application of Theories of Meaningfulness to Asylum Lawyering .......................................................82

E. Application of Communitarian Approach to healing in Asylum Lawyering .........................................84

CHAPTER 7: RESEARCH LIMITATIONS AND FURTHER RESEARCH PLANS .........................................86

BIBLIOGRAPHY ..............................................................................................................................................87

JOSEF RUZEK, PROFESSIONALS COPING WITH VICARIOUS TRAUMA, 3(2) NCP CLINICAL NEWSLETTER AT HTTP://WWW.NCPTSD.ORG/PUBLICATIONS/CQ/V3/N2/RUZEK.HTML ...............90

STAFF WELFARE UNIT, UNHCR HEAD QUARTERS, MANAGING THE STRESS OF HUMANITARIAN EMERGENCIES (2001) AT HTTP://WWW.THE-
ECENTRE.NET/RESOURCES/E_LIBRARY/DOC/MANAGINGSTRESS.PDF. ...........................................92

MISSION READINESS AND STRESS MANAGEMENT, UNITED NATIONS OFFICE OF HUMAN RESOURCES MANAGEMENT NEW YORK, MARCH 1995 AT
HTTP://WWW.UN.ORG/DEPTS/OHRM/STRESS.HTM .......................................................................92

APPENDIX 1 ..................................................................................................................................................XCIX

APPENDIX 2 ..................................................................................................................................................C

VI